DOMINION ORDERS IN COUNCIL.

(Ref. 460,207.)

AT THE GOVERNMENT HOUSE AT OTTAWA.

Wednesday, the 23rd day of March, 1904.

PRESENT:

HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL
IN COUNCIL.

WHEREAS under the Regulations for the disposal of coal lands, the property of the Dominion Government in Manitoba, the North-West Territories and British Columbia, established by Order in Council dated 19th May, 1902, provision is made for the sale of lands containing anthracite coal at an upset price of $20.00 an acre, and for coal other than anthracite at an upset price of $19.00 an acre, subject to the payment of royalty at the rate of ten cents per ton of 2,000 pounds on the output of the mine;

And whereas it is represented that settlers in the vicinity of coal mines have in the past been able to secure their supply of coal for fuel purposes at the rate of from $1.00 to $1.50 per ton, delivered at the pit's mouth; but that recently, where only a limited number of mines are being operated in any locality, there has been a tendency on the part of the mine owner to object to this class of trade, as loading the coal directly into cars is probably more convenient for him than disposing of it to the settler;

And whereas there appears to be no reason why the settlers should be required to pay an additional price for having the coal carried by rail to the nearest station if they can have the hauling done themselves,—

Therefore, the Governor-General in Council is pleased to order and doth hereby order that the Regulations for the disposal of coal lands above referred to be amended by providing that all sales of such lands shall in the future be made subject to the provision that actual settlers shall be entitled to buy, at the pit's mouth, whatever coal they may require for their own use, but not for barter or sale, at a price not to exceed $1.75 per ton, and that the patent which may be issued for coal lands shall be made subject to such provision.

JOHN J. MCGEE,
Clerk of the Privy Council.

PROVINCIAL SECRETARY.

HIS HONOUR the Lieutenant-Governor in Council having, by Order bearing date the 9th day of December, A.D. 1903, referred to the Full Court of the Supreme Court of British Columbia for hearing and consideration the question as to whether Rule 34 of section 82 of Chapter 138 of the Revised Statutes, 1897, being the "Coal Mines Regulation Act," as enacted by section 2 of Chapter 17 of the Statutes of 1897, was within the competence of the Legislature of British Columbia to enact, in so far as it provides that no Chinaman shall be appointed to, or shall occupy, any position of trust or responsibility in or about a mine subject to the "Coal Mines Regulation Act," whereby through his ignorance, carelessness or negligence he might endanger the life or limb of any person employed in or about such mine, namely, as banksman, onsetter, signalman, brakesman, pointsman, furnaceman, engineer, or be employed below ground or at the windlass of a sinking-pit; and the said question having been heard and considered by the said Honourable Court, the said Court, on the 18th day of April, A.D. 1904, gave judgment answering the said question in the negative. The reasons for judgment given by the members of the Court who heard and considered the said question are as follows:—

THE HONOURABLE THE CHIEF JUSTICE.

In Bryden v. Union Colliery (1899), A. C., 580, the question as to the competence of the Provincial Legislature to enact section 4 of the "Coal Mines Regulation Act," being R. S. B. C., Chap. 138, by which it was provided inter alia that no Chinaman should be employed below ground in any coal mine to which the Act applied, came up for decision, and their Lordships answered the question adversely to the Province.

By Rule 34 enacted in section 82 of the same Act, as amended by 1903, chap. 17, sec. 2, it is provided as follows:—

"Rule 34. No Chinaman or person unable to speak English shall be appointed to, or shall occupy, any position of trust or responsibility in or about a mine subject to this Act, whereby through his ignorance, carelessness or negligence he might endanger the life or limb of any person employed in or about a mine, viz., as banksman, onsetter, signalman, brakesman, pointsman, furnaceman, engineer, or be employed below ground or at the windlass of a sinking-pit."

Acting under the authority of this Rule and of the penalizing sections of the Act, the Provincial Government caused informations to be laid against the manager of the Wellington Colliery Company, Limited, which owns and operates a coal mine within the meaning of the Act, situate at Comox, with the result that some 74 convictions have been recorded, and a large aggregate of fines imposed for employing Chinamen below ground contrary to the provisions of the rule.

The Company has taken out rules nisi to quash the convictions, but His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor considering, under the advice of His Ministers, that the constitutionality of this enactment should be decided as quickly as possible, has, under the authority of the Supreme Court Act, referred the question to the Full Court in the following terms:—

"Whether the said rule, as re-enacted as aforesaid, was within the competence of the Legislature of British Columbia to enact in so far as it provides that no Chinaman shall be appointed to, or shall occupy, any position of trust or responsibility in or about a mine subject to the 'Coal Mines Regulation Act,' whereby through his ignorance, carelessness or negligence he might endanger the life or limb of any person employed in or about such mine, viz.: As banksman, onsetter, signalman, brakesman, pointsman, furnaceman, engineer, or be employed below ground or at the windlass of a sinking-pit."

A special sittings of the Full Court was accordingly held, and at the opening of the proceedings the learned Attorney-General and Mr. A. E. McPhillips appeared for the Crown, and Messrs. Cassidy and O'Brien for the Company.

It was made apparent to us at the outset that the learned counsel had failed to agree upon the terms in which the question should be stated for our opinion, and a suggestion that the order of reference should be amended by setting out some of the convictions, and requesting the opinion of the Court as to their validity, was not accepted by the learned Crown counsel, with the result that the counsel for the Company withdrew from the proceedings. This, of course, is unfortunate, as, although we are bound to consider the question submitted in conformity with the request of His Honour, we labour under the disadvantage of not hearing what there is to be said against the legislation.

However, after hearing the elaborate arguments of the learned counsel for the Crown, I am of the opinion that the decision in the case of Bryden v. The Union Colliery Company, already referred to, concludes the matter, and that we should answer His Honour's question in the negative. That case expressly decided that the enactment that no Chinaman shall be employed below ground was ultra vires of the Legislature of the Province, on the ground that the leading feature of the legislation is to debar all persons belonging to a named nationality from engaging in a particular employment or class of labour, and that power to pass legislation of this character resides in the Parliament of Canada, to the exclusion of the Legislatures of the Provinces.

Rule 34 is, quoad this question, an identical re-enactment of the legislation thus reviewed, and is, therefore, to such an extent null and void.

It was strenuously pressed upon us by the learned counsel that the rule was a mere regulation affecting the mode in which coal mining below ground is to be carried on, and that the expression "No Chinaman" has no reference to the question of nationality or alienage (just as would have been the case had the expression been, for example, "No Indian," "No Mormon," or "No Jew," terms which do not connote the idea of nationality), but is merely descriptive of a race or class which, wherever resident or born, is unsuited by certain idiosyncrasies from being safely employed below ground. But granting all this, and that legislation which did not purport to shut the door against a given nationality would be competent to the Province, the short answer is that the identical expression was used in the legislation passed upon by the Judicial Committee, and it is impossible to suppose that the expression is used in any other sense in the rule.

If the legislature intended to make a regulation prohibiting a particular class from being employed below ground which would not necessarily be open to the interpretation placed upon the enactment before the Judicial Committee it would have been a simple matter to do so, but to re-enact legislation which has already been declared within the exclusive jurisdiction of the Parliament of Canada, without taking care to exclude such interpretation, is merely to invite the same decision.

It was, however, contended by the learned counsel that the authority of Bryden v. The Union Colliery Co. is impaired by the later decision in the Tomey Homma case (1903, A. C. 151). For my part I do not see what the one decision has to do with the other. The question I raised in the two cases are not in the same plane. The one case decided that the power to exclude a particular nationality from a given employment was vested in the Parliament of Canada, and the other that each Legislature in the exercise of its power to regulate the provincial franchise could exclude any particular nationality from the right to vote. Indeed, with great respect for the learned Judges who held otherwise, I should have thought that the right to pass the legislation reviewed in the Tomey Homma case followed as a self-evident corollary from the grant of the power to amend the constitution of the Province. If the Legislature under such a power could not from time to time enact who should constitute the electorate, it is difficult to see the use of the power or why it was conferred. However, it is not necessary to pursue the matter any further; suffice it to say, that if we were to hold that the present case is not the case of Union Colliery v. Bryden over again, we should virtually say that that decision is brutum fulmen.

In my opinion His Honour's question must be answered in the negative.

G. HUNTER, C. J.

THE HONOURABLE MR. JUSTICE IRVING.

In the reasons for judgment in the Bryden case Lord Watson narrows the case down to this single question, whether the enactments of the 4th section of the "Coal Mines Regulation Act," in so far as they are related to Chinamen, were within the competency of the Provincial Legislature.

He then proceeds as follows:—"The leading feature of the enactments consists in this—that they have, and can have, no application except as to Chinamen who are aliens or naturalized subjects, and that they establish no rule or regulation except that these aliens or naturalised subjects shall not work, or be allowed to work, underground coal mines within the Province of British Columbia."

The judgment then declares that as the legislation then under consideration was a matter which directly concerned the rights, privileges and disabilities of aliens or naturalised subjects it was ultra vires of the Provincial Parliament.

It is stated by Counsel for the Crown that in the course of argument in the Bryden case before the Judicial Committee an admission or a concession was made by Counsel that enabled that body to decide as they did. I am unable to find any trace of such an admission in the reasons for judgment to which we have been referred; on the contrary, I see a distinct statement that the only point for consideration was the constitutional question as to whether section 4 was or was not ultra vires. Moreover, I do not think any admission of Counsel could affect a decision touching the constitutionality of a statute.

Then we were referred by Counsel for the Crown to the Tomey Homma case. It was said that the decision in that case explained away the decision in the Bryden case and left us free to deal with the enactment in Rule 34 untrammelled by the decision given on section 4 of the Statute of 1890.

The decision in the Tomey Homma case, as I understand it, reaffirms the decision in the Bryden case.

In Tomey Homma's case the question involved in the appeal was the constitutionality of the Provincial Act which prevented a Japanese from obtaining electoral privileges in Provincial elections.

In delivering the judgment in that case the Lord Chancellor drew a distinction between privileges and rights, that is to say, privileges which might or might not follow as a consequence of naturalization and the right of protection which (as the correlative of the obligation of allegiance) was necessarily involved in the nationality conferred by naturalization.

The protection to which he referred was "that general protection of the King (whereof Littleton here (s. 199) speaketh), which extends generally to all the King's loyal subjects, denizens and aliens, within the realm."

He then stated that the Bryden case was decided on this ground,—that the Provincial Legislature could not deprive the Chinese in this Province, whether naturalized or not, of those ordinary rights which belong to every inhabitant of British territory. (1898, A. C. 73, 155.)

I understand him to mean that the Provincial Parliament, while at liberty to refuse to accord to a naturalized subject a privilege, cannot deprive an alien of those fundamental rights to which every person living under the aegis of the British Sovereign is entitled. The power to legislate as to these rights is reserved to the Dominion Parliament by sub-section 25 of section 91 and the proviso at the end of that section.

The point submitted to us is as to the constitutionality of an enactment which declares that no Chinaman shall be "appointed to or shall occupy any position of trust or responsibility in or about a mine subject to this Act, whereby through his ignorance, carelessness or negligence he might endanger the life or limb of any person employed in or about a mine, viz.: as banksman, onsetter, signalman, brakesman, pointsman, furnaceman, engineer, or be employed below ground, or at the windlass of a sinking-pit."

Now, in what respect does this differ from the legislation considered in the Bryden case? The calling of the enactment in question a Rule or Regulation cannot affect its constitutionality, nor can the enactment derive any greater validity by reason of its insertion in the middle of a rule which in other respects may be intra vires. Is not the pith and substance of this so-called Rule to prevent Chinamen from working underground, regardless of their individual fitness or capacity to properly perform the work?

In the paragraph quoted I can see no rule or regulation established, or sought to be established, by which the fitness of a Chinaman to properly perform the work of an underground miner can be tested. He may speak the English language perfectly, he may be a skilled mining engineer, but these points are immaterial. He is debarred by reason of the fact that he is a Chinaman. I refer to these matters not because I wish to discuss the policy or impolicy of the enactment, but in order to show, by the absence of these tests, that there is in truth no real difference between this statute of 1903 and the statute of 1890 considered in the case of Bryden v. Union Colliery Co.

For these reasons I think the decision in the Bryden case should govern our answer to the question submitted to us.

P. Æ. IRVING, J.

THE HONOURABLE MR. JUSTICE MARTIN.

What has to be decided on this reference is whether the Legislature of this Province has exceeded the power it admittedly possesses to regulate the working of coal mines.

Now, on the face of it, the rule in question does not purport to do more than that, and the full title of the Statute by virtue of which it is passed declares that it is "An Act to make Regulations with respect to Coal Mines." And the particular section, 82, which sets out the rules, 35 in number, calls them "general rules" and says they "shall be observed so far as is reasonably practical in every mine to which this Act applies." And that as a group they are necessary rules for the regulation of coal mines in fact as well as in name appears by a perusal of them. They deal with various subjects of the first importance to the safety of miners, such as ventilation, fencing, safety lamps, explosives, water, signals, inspection, and similar matters. The last one, 35, creates the offence for contravention, and No. 34 is that under consideration.

It deals with two classes of persons, Chinamen, and "persons unable to speak English," and debars them from being employed in certain specified "positions of trust or responsibility in or about a mine." The said prohibited positions are banksman, onsetter, signalman, brakesman, pointsman, furnaceman, engineer, or at the windlass of a sinking-pit, or below ground. Some reasons for this proscription of a Chinaman or other person as mentioned are given, and they are that "through his ignorance, carelessness or negligence he might endanger the life or limb of any person employed in or about a mine." From this language it is apparent that the Legislature, rightly or wrongly, entertains the belief that the presence of said proscribed persons in or about a mine is fraught with danger to others. Now, it is abundantly clear that if the Legislature has constitutional control over a certain matter it need give no reasons for the exercise of it; and further, that if it had or gave reasons which it thought were sufficient, but which in reality were grounded upon erroneous beliefs or ideas, nevertheless its acts cannot be successfully impeached on that ground. It is the possession of the requisite power, and not the assignment of reasons for its exercise, that determines the constitutionality of a legislative enactment. Given the power, it may lawfully be exercised on bad or no reasons and in pursuance of a mistaken policy, but the discretion so exercised is not open to review, because within its constitutional jurisdiction the Legislature is supreme, and if, to apply that principle to the present case, no part of the Federal jurisdiction can be found to apply to this matter, then the Provincial Legislature is the absolute master of the situation. If, in support of such a proposition, it were necessary to cite authority it will be found in the case of Bryden v. Union Colliery Co., (1899), A. C., 580; and in Tomey Homma's case (1900), 7, B. C., 368; (1903), A. C., 151; in the former of which, at pp. 584-5, it is stated:—

"But the question raised directly concerns the legislative authority of the Legislature of British Columbia, which depends upon the construction of ss. 91 and 92 of the British North America Act, 1867. These clauses distribute all subjects of legislation between the Parliament of the Dominion and the several Legislatures of the Provinces. In assigning legislative power to the one or the other of these Parliaments, it is not made a statutory condition that the exercise of such power shall be in the opinion of a court of law, discreet. In so far as they possess legislative jurisdiction, the discretion committed to the Parliaments, whether of the Dominion or of the Provinces, is unfettered. It is the proper function of a court of law to determine what are the limits of the jurisdiction committed to them; but, when that point has been settled, courts of law have no right whatever to inquire whether their jurisdiction has been exercised wisely or not. There are various considerations discussed in the judgments of the Courts below, which, in the opinion of their Lordships, have as little relevancy to the question which they had to decide as the evidence upon which these considerations are founded."

And in the latter at page 155:—"The policy of such an enactment as that which excludes a particular race from the franchise is not a topic which their Lordships are entitled to consider."

Doubtless if the circumstances were such that it plainly appeared that the Legislature, under the guise of adopting an otherwise legal course, was indirectly attempting to do something which was ultra vires and thus mala fide break the bounds of its constitutional limitation, the Court would not hesitate to put the proper construction upon such methods (see Tomey Homma's case, page 157), but an intention of that kind should not be lightly imputed, and I see no ground on the whole facts for inferring it here.

Seeing that, as has been noticed, some reasons are given for the present enactment, it may not be out of place to remark that, as regards one of the two classes aimed at, those unable to speak English, any one who has any knowledge of mining operations knows that the reason given is a valid one, for the presence of such persons in a coal mine is plainly undesirable, because their ignorance of the language of the country involves the failure to readily understand and obey orders, which would be an additional source of danger to their fellow-workmen, and it could not be seriously contended that the Legislature had not the right to exclude such "ignorant," and consequently dangerous, persons from mines. On this ground a Chinaman who could not speak English would, in common with all others likewise deficient, be properly excluded, quite apart from the question of his race or origin. That disqualification, in short, is linguistic, not racial or national, and in this respect there is no difference in treatment between Chinese and others, and consequently no possible ground of complaint. For example, there are many natural born British subjects in Canada, particularly those of French origin, who cannot speak English, but no one would suggest that their exclusion for that reason would not be within the powers of the Legislature, and to that extent at least the enactment is undoubtedly intra vires. But, it may be said, the real difference is that as regards a Chinaman he is barred as such, even though he possesses the linguistic qualification: that is to say, he is also barred simply because he is a Chinaman racially or nationally, as well as linguistically, hence a dual bar. I pause here to say that though it has been seen that it is unnecessary to give reasons for exclusion, and that it is immaterial even if such reasons are invalid on the face of them, nevertheless, I do not wish to be understood that I consider further reasons (and at least plausible ones) could not have been given or may not have been present to the mind of the legislators in framing this portion of the rule regarding Chinese. It may well be that the members of the House believed, rightly or wrongly, in the existence of several racial peculiarities in that people which have in this Province been largely attributed to them, such as fatalistic tendencies, light estimation of the value of human life and consequent carelessness and neglect in the taking of necessary precautions in a hazardous occupation, apathy to suffering, liability to panic in presence of danger, and absence of that esprit de corps which affords such great assistance to fellow workmen when called upon without warning to face a sudden peril, particularly when underground. I do not for a moment say that any or all of such beliefs as regards Chinese in British Columbia is or are well founded, or that I share them, or that if they exist they may not in other occupations be more than compensated for by the possession of admirable qualities such as patience, industry and thrift, but, undoubtedly, there are very many in this Province who do entertain some or all of such beliefs to a greater or less extent.

The extent to which qualities so undesirable in an employment already sufficiently hazardous exist in the general body of Chinese residents in British Columbia is one which would not only be a legitimate but most proper subject for consideration by the Legislature of this Province in regulating the employment of such residents in mines. The fact that the exclusion is only partial, and that they are permitted, generally speaking, to engage in those numerous branches of labour "in or about mines" which are carried on above ground, shows on the face of it a willingness to allow them to earn their bread in coal mining so long as they do not endanger the safety of others. And be it further remarked that simply because a resident of British Columbia of any race is prevented from working underground he has no just cause of complaint. The rule might properly have provided that no person under age, and no woman should be so employed, though the effect would be to bar considerably more than half the whole population of Canada from that employment. It happens that it is not the custom in Canada for women to work in coal mines, and so that illustration would not possibly, without reflection, appeal to some; but it must be remembered that it is, or till very lately was, the custom in some highly civilised countries in Europe, and that, for example, great numbers of women were so employed in France and to such an extent that the employment was made the subject of a well known book by one of the greatest authors of that country; I refer to "Criminal," by M. Zola.

To take another striking illustration in this country of the power of Parliament to wholly exclude a large body of its citizens, being natural-born British subjects (Canadians), from a great and lucrative branch of business; I refer to the case of the Indians throughout Canada, who, according to the last census (1901) amount to 93,460 of pure blood and 34,481 half-breeds. Not only is it declared by the Federal Legislature (which has the control of Indian affairs) to be a crime to supply liquor to one of these aboriginal natives of our country, but it is also a crime for him to have even a glass of intoxicating liquor in his possession ("Indian Act," R. S. B. C., chap. 43, secs. 94, 96), the consequence of which is that he is shut out from several very important and lucrative branches of trade and commerce, such as distilling, brewing, the wine, spirit and saloon trade, and, almost wholly, inn-keeping. This is a sweeping proscription, but it is considered, rightly or wrongly, that the North American Indian is so inherently constituted that indulgence in intoxicating liquor has such an exceptionally inflammatory effect upon him that the public safety demands he should, so far as possible, be removed from temptation to indulgence therein. Now, supposing that the inherent defect in the Indian took a different form and was of such a nature that the Legislature of British Columbia deemed it unsafe to others to allow him to work underground in a mine, or that the 17,437 persons of the negro race resident in Canada should be deemed to labour under a like infirmity, and that the rule in question had read "No Indian and no Negro" instead of "No Chinaman," can there be any doubt at all about the constitutionality of such a provision? In my opinion, clearly not. And what greater rights in this country have, or should have, the Chinese as a race than the Indians of Canada, almost all of whom are natural born British subjects, or than the Negro natural born subjects of the Crown? The term "Indian" or "Negro" would clearly be used in a racial and descriptive sense, and hence unassailable.

Assuming, for the moment, the fact to be that the presence of Chinese underground was a real danger to other workmen, and that the Legislature expressly dealing with them as a race and not as a nation passed a regulation prohibiting their employment underground, it must, in my opinion, be admitted that this would be within its powers. To contend otherwise would be to assert that the power does not exist, though it admittedly does exist somewhere. Now, it cannot repose in the Federal Parliament, for it can only, in this relation, deal with Chinese on their national basis as aliens or naturalised persons; therefore, it must be in the Provincial Legislature.

It becomes necessary then, to consider carefully in what sense the word "Chinaman" is employed in the section in question; for if it is used in a sense which is racial or descriptive, very different results may follow from the use of it in a national sense, which latter is that in which it has hitherto been regarded and considered. How necessary it is to definitely establish as a matter of fact the way in which this word is and has been used in this Province appears from Bryden's case, wherein at page 586, Lord Watson says: "The words

'No Chinaman,' as they are used in section 4 of the Provincial Act, were probably meant to denote, and they certainly include, every adult Chinaman who has not been naturalised." This not unnatural assumption of His Lordship, as based on the statements of counsel before him and the facts as then presented, of the "probable" narrow and restricted meaning of the words, will be found to be very far from the fact.

Illustrations in addition to those already given of the way in which words in this country are used racially and descriptively, though originating in nationality, are not wanting. Thus we have the term "French Canadians," as applied to our very numerous fellow citizens of French origin, though for over 140 years they and their fathers have been subjects of the British Crown; and also the term "Jews," as applied to our fellow subjects and others in Canada of Hebraic origin, who no longer have a country or government of their own, and therefore are now not a nation but a race dispersed among, and the subjects of, many and various nations, and whose designation is properly preserved only by adherence to their ancient religion.

Bearing then in mind the distinction between a term used racially and descriptively and one used nationally, and turning to the Statute in question, it may, at first sight, and to one not familiar with the history of this branch of legislation, appear strange that it does not contain any definition of the word "Chinaman." In such circumstances it is only fair to assume that the word was used by the Legislature in the same or a similar sense as that in which it had theretofore ordinarily employed it for many years in its various enactments dealing with that race, which must be taken to be the way in which it is ordinarily understood in this Province. The rule of construction is that "Intelligible words * * * * must be construed according to their natural and ordinary signification." Attorney-General for Ontario v. Hamilton Street Railway Co. (1903), A. C., 524, 528, and probably the best method of ascertaining that signification in the present circumstances is to find out the sense in which it has been used by the Legislature itself. This method was resorted to in the Precious Metals case—Bainbridge v. Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway (1896) 1 M. M. C., 98; 4 B. C., 181; (1896) A. C., 561; wherein Mr. Justice McCreight says:—"Not only do these contemporaneous Acts of the Province show this, but antecedent legislation is in the same direction."

Referring then to the statutes of this Legislature, and beginning twenty years ago with the important "Act to Prevent Chinese from acquiring Crown Lands," Cap. 2, 1884, it is first enacted that it is unlawful for Crown lands to be pre-empted by or sold "to any Chinese," or for "any Chinese" to divert water or obtain a water record; and then comes the following definition:—

"3. The term Chinese in this Act shall mean any native of the Chinese Empire or its dependencies, and shall include any person of the Chinese race."

This is clearly aimed at the Chinese as a race as well as a nation inhabiting a particular locality. And the same feature is brought out in another Act passed in the same year, chap. 3, entitled "An Act to Prevent the Immigration of Chinese," wherein it was enacted:

"Sec. 2. It shall be unlawful for any Chinese to come into the Province of British Columbia or any part thereof."

This statute was held to be ultra vires, but it is important as showing the scope in which the word "Chinese" was employed, the definition thereof being as follows:—

"1. The word 'Chinese' in this Act shall mean and include any native of China or its dependencies, or of any islands in the Chinese seas, not born of British parents."

This shows very plainly that it is the race and not the nationality or locality of birth that is objected to, for a natural born subject of the Chinese Empire was not excluded if he were born of British parents, though in law, fact and name he was, accurately speaking, a Chinaman. On the other hand, the child of Chinese parents domiciled in England, and born there, or even in other provinces of Canada, and therefore a natural born British subject, was excluded. Undoubtedly, the word was not intended to be employed in a narrow and restrictive sense as regards this continent, for there are and were then many thousands of the Chinese race in United States territory on this Pacific Coast to the south of us, who, according to United States laws, were natural born subjects of that country, and it is incredible to believe that the Legislature did not object to Chinese who were born on one side of the Pacific Ocean under one flag and did object to the same race born on the other side of the same ocean under another flag. To a resident of this Province such a contention would sound preposterous, and I do not think anyone who knows this country would be bold enough to advance it seriously.

In the "Chinese Regulation Act," chap. 4, passed in the same year, a similar definition in sec. 2 is found with a like prohibition against "any person of the Chinese race."

That the same feature is constantly kept in view appears by all subsequent legislation dealing with the subject, of which the following may be taken as illustrative:—

1885, chap. 13—"An Act to Prevent the Immigration of Chinese," sec. 1.

1886, chap. 25, sec. 29—"Vancouver Electric Light Co.'s Incorporation Act."

1886, chap. 33, sec. 37—"Coquitlam Water Works Act."

1886, chap. 34, secs. 3, 4, 5—"Nanaimo Water Works Amendment Act."

1886, chap. 35, sec. 38—"Vancouver Water Works Act."

1895, chap. 59, sec. 5—"Burrard Inlet Railway Co. Act."

1897, chap. 1, secs. 2, 3, 4—"Alien Labour Act."

1898, chap. 2, sec. 2—"Labour Regulation Act."

1899, chap. 29, sec. 36—"Liquor Licence Act."

Rev. Stat. of B. C., chap. 113, secs. 2, 5, and 114—"The Land Act."

Rev. Stat. of B. C., chap. 67, sec. 8—"The Provincial Elections Act."

These Acts show a very remarkable adherence by the Legislature to the view that the Chinese are objected to not so much on the ground of nationality as on that of race. This is particularly brought home by the fact that the term "No Chinese," followed by the definition including the race, is employed in the two Statutes relating to labour matters above cited. The significance of this will be readily understood by the people of this Province who realise how carefully legislation relating to labour is watched because of its exceptionally broad application, and such terms therein employed may be safely taken as showing how they are there used and understood not only by the Legislature but the people at large. The "Land Act" also, as being a public Statute of the first importance, is likewise a safe guide, and it is noticeable that though by section 5 thereof an alien, generally speaking, after taking a declaration of intention to become a British subject, may pre-empt Crown lands, yet if he be a "Chinese," or of "the Chinese race," he cannot do so, although he may be a natural born British subject. Further, in the "Liquor Licence Act," section 36, there is a very apt illustration of the way in which three classes of citizens are racially described and grouped as follows:—

"36. No licence under this Act shall be issued or transferred to any person of the Indian, Chinese or Japanese race."

And the same thing occurs in the Provincial Elections Act, R. S. B. C., Cap. 67, only brought out more clearly in sec. 3 by inserting in full the said standard definition, and apparently with the intention of making it clearer and wider (though in my opinion not really accomplishing that end), in the case of Chinese and Japanese, three words, "naturalised or not," are added.

This section has been the subject of a judicial decision already noted, and to which I shall refer later—Tomey Homma's case supra.

Having regard to the foregoing, it is abundantly clear to my mind that when the Legislature, in 1903, passed the Act in question it then used the words "No Chinaman" in the sense in which it had so long and so often used then before, i. e., racially and descriptively, as distinguished from the narrow local and national one. And a final test to apply to the language is, could it even be plausibly contended in case the Empire of China were broken up and distributed among other powers and its present Government wholly abolished, that the words in question "No Chinaman" had no longer any application? Clearly, it could not, and indeed the operation of the Treaty of Nankin, in 1842, whereby the Chinese Island of Hong Kong became British Territory, shows how groundless such a view would be, because in 1901 there was almost 275,000 Chinese in that Colony, and does anyone suppose that they would not come within the said prohibition even if every one of them was a natural born British subject? Therefore, it is manifest that the true construction of the said words depends not upon a nation which may lose its government and its territory, but upon a race which has within itself certain marked characteristics which appear to defy place and even time itself.

Even if the words are considered as applicable to a wider field than British Columbia, the same conception of their meaning officially prevails as may perhaps be best illustrated by the instructions to officers taking the last Dominion census, which will be found in the introduction to the census report of Canada for 1901, vol. 1, secs. 47-54, pp. xvii, xix, wherein the matter is fully gone into. I extract, for example, portions of No. 47 and No. 53:—

"47. The races of men will be designated by the use of 'w' for white, 'r' for red, 'b' for black, and 'y' for yellow. The whites are, of course, the Caucasian race, the reds are the American Indian, the blacks are the African or negro, and the yellows are the Mongolian (Japanese and Chinese). But only pure whites will be classed as whites; the children begotten of marriages between whites and anyone of the other races will be classed as red, black or yellow, as the case may be, irrespective of the degree of colour.

"53. Among whites the racial or tribal origin is traced through the father, as in English, Scotch, Irish, Welsh, French, German, Italian, Scandinavian, etc. Care must be taken, however, not to apply the terms 'American' or 'Canadian' in a racial sense, as there are not races of men so called. 'Japanese,' 'Chinese' and 'Negro' are proper racial terms; but in the case of Indians the names of their tribes should be given, 'Chippewa,' 'Cree,' etc.

Moreover, the Federal Parliament itself has for many years used the word in the sense contended for. This appears from the various Chinese Immigration Restriction Acts. Taking the existing one, cap. 8 of 1903, by sec. 6 it imposes an immigration tax of $500 on "every person of Chinese origin irrespective of allegiance." And the definition is:—

"(d.) The expression 'Chinese immigrant' means any person of Chinese origin (including any person whose father was of Chinese origin) entering Canada and not entitled to the privilege of exemption provided for by section 6 of this Act."

And it was found necessary to exempt from the operation of Act (b)—

"(b.) The children born in Canada of parents of Chinese origin who have left Canada for educational or other purposes on substantiating their identity to the satisfaction of the controller at the port or place where they seek to enter on their return."

There is not even a reference here to a "native of the Chinese empire or its dependencies" as there was in the B. C. Statutes, and the sole test is a racial one, i. e., that of origin and not of locality, nationality, or allegiance. Nor am I without the highest authority in support of this racial view. I refer to the judgment of the Lords of the Privy Council in the case of the Japanese Tomey Homma, supra, wherein the words in question were:—

"The expression 'Japanese' shall mean any native of the Japanese Empire or its dependencies not born of British parents, and shall include any person of the Japanese race naturalised or not."

And it was argued (p. 154) that it was "attempted to impose on naturalised aliens of the Japanese race, on the score of their alien origin alone, a perpetual exclusion from the electoral franchise." But the Lord Chancellor in delivering their Lordships' judgment, after pointing out (p. 155) that it was an enactment dealing with the exclusion of a particular "race," goes on to say, p. 156:—

"The first observation which arises is that the enactment supposed to be ultra vires and to be impeached upon the ground of its dealing with alienage and naturalisation, had not necessarily anything to do with either. A child of Japanese parentage born in Vancouver City is a natural-born subject of the King, and would be equally excluded from the possession of the franchise."

And he further pointed out that because there was a mere mention of the word "naturalised" in the definition, which had been seized upon to curtail the section and bring it within the scope of Federal authority, yet it would be an "absurdity" to hold that the law was thereby made ultra vires, for, he says, in language singularly applicable to the case at bar, "The truth is that the language of the section does not purport to deal with the consequences of either alienage or naturalisation."

If, therefore, their Lordships had no difficulty in arriving at the conclusion that Homma's case did not, under the language in question, depend upon nationality or one of its consequences and attributes, alienage, or a secondary consequence when the old nationality and alienage became changed into naturalisation, which is a new nationality, still less should this Court have difficulty in arriving at a like conclusion when there is no mention of naturalisation in what I have styled the "standard" definition of the word "Chinese" as employed by the Legislature.

I feel, therefore, that I am fully justified in proceeding on the assumption that the word is used in that sense, and that only.

In view of the pregnant suggestion of the Lord Chancellor, above quoted, that there are Japanese in this Province who are not either aliens or naturalised persons, it becomes expedient to apply that suggestion to this case because it involves consideration of a fact of much importance and of which the Court in its common knowledge of the people and affairs of this country will take judicial notice. It is that there is a considerable and ever increasing third class of Chinese residents of this Province who are neither aliens nor naturalized persons, but natural born British subjects, under the well-known rule laid down in Dicey's Conflict of Laws (1896), p. 175:—

"Rule 22.—Subject to the exceptions hereinafter mentioned, any person who (whatever the nationality of his parents) is born within the British Dominions, is a natural born British subject."

This third class is composed of the children or grand children of Chinese parents domiciled here. It should be borne in mind, though often overlooked, that with the exception hereinafter mentioned, the first Chinese settlers who came to the then Colonies of Vancouver Island and British Columbia arrived at least as early as 1858. Their presence in British Columbia as placer gold miners on the Fraser River is first recorded by Governor Douglas in his despatch of August 19th, 1858, to the Secretary of State for the Colonies (Papers Relating to the Affairs of British Columbia, 1858, Vol. 1, p. 27), and they had increased in numbers to such an extent that in his despatch of October 9th, 1860, the Governor encloses an address to the Grand Jury of Cayoosh (now Lillooet) to him which contains this statement (Pt. lv., p. 27):—

"The Grand Jury desire to call your Excellency's attention more particularly to the great number of Chinamen now residing in and flocking to this Colony," etc., and that body asked that they receive protection as useful additions to the population. Historically, and as being the exception above mentioned, it may not be out of place to note that the first Chinese, some 70 in number, who came to what is now British Columbia, were brought to Nootka Sound from Canton so long ago as 1789 by Lieut. John Meares, R.N., and his associates, who had embarked in the North-West fur trade. In that officer's memorial, presented to the House of Commons on May 13th, 1790, he states that the two ships which arrived at Nootka in June and July, 1789, "had also on board, in addition to their crews, several artificers of different professions and near 70 Chinese, who intended to become settlers on the American coast in the service and under the protection of the Associated Company."

On the seizure of these British ships and property by the Spaniards these Chinese were detained at Nootka and as Meares says (p. 11) were compelled to enter the service of Spain and "were employed in the mines which had then been opened in the lands which your Memorialists had purchased." (And see the information of William Grubb accompanying the Memorial). They were shortly thereafter transported to Mexico by order of the Spanish Viceroy thereof (Authentic Statement relative to Nootka Sound, London, 1890, p. 15), so as a factor in the population of this Province they need not be further considered, and the year 1858 may be taken as that of their introduction to an appreciable extent.

According to the report of the Royal Commission on Chinese and Japanese Immigration, 1902, p. 7, there were in 1901, 16,792 Chinese in Canada, distributed as therein mentioned, throughout the various Provinces of Canada, but the greater majority of them (14,376) reside in this Province; Quebec comes next with 1,044, and Ontario 712; in this City (Victoria) the number was then 2,715. These people have considerably increased during the last two years, and in the case of their younger children the providing of suitable accommodation for them in the public schools has become, in Victoria at least, a public question of concern requiring special consideration by the educational authorities.

I have been careful to go into these facts because heretofore they have been overlooked, and it is essential that there should be no further misapprehension about the true situation, for unless it is correctly presented to the Court decisions based on partial and insufficient facts can have no real application.

Now, it must be admitted that as regards these Chinese who are natural-born British subjects, the children or grandchildren of the Chinese pioneers, the enactment in question cannot be successfully impeached, and so far at least must be held to be intra vires.

Seeing then that the facts established are (1) that there does exist a third class of Chinese in this Province who are natural-born British subjects to whom the principles of the decisions respecting aliens and naturalised persons have no application; and (2) that the Legislature deals, and intends to deal, with Chinese as a race only, what is there that prevents this Court from advising His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor in Council that the enactment in question is intra vires? The answer is, nothing, unless it be the judgment of the Privy Council in Bryden's case. In considering that case it is of the first importance that the following rule on the construction and application of a judicial decision be borne in mind. I refer to Quinn v. Leatham (1901), A. C., 495, wherein the Lord Chancellor says, in the House of Lords:—

"Now, before discussing the case of Allen v. Flood in this House, and what was decided therein, there are two observations of a general character which I wish to make, and one is to repeat what I have very often said before, that every judgment must be read as applicable to the particular facts proved, or assumed to be proved, since the generality of the expressions which may be found there are not intended to be expositions of the whole law, but governed and qualified by the particular facts of the case in which such expressions are to be found. The other is that a case is only an authority for what it actually decides. I entirely deny that it can be quoted for a proposition that may seem to follow logically from it. Such a mode of reasoning assumes that the law is necessarily a logical code, whereas every lawyer must acknowledge that the law is not always logical at all. My Lords, I think the application of these two propositions renders the decision of this case perfectly plain, notwithstanding the decision of the case of Allen v. Flood."

It was this principle that the Lord Chancellor doubtless had in mind when in distinguishing Tomey Homma's case from that of the Union Colliery v. Bryden, he said, referring to the fact that this Court thought it understood and was following Bryden's case, that—

"This, indeed, seems to have been the opinion of the learned judges below; but they were under the impression that they were precluded from acting on their own judgment by the decision of this Board in the case of Union Colliery Co. v. Bryden. That case depended upon totally different grounds. This Board, dealing with the particular facts of that case, came to the conclusion that the regulations there impeached were not really aimed at the regulation of coal mines at all, but were in truth devised to deprive the Chinese, naturalised or not, of the ordinary rights of the inhabitants of British Columbia, and, in effect, to prohibit their continued existence in that Province, since it prohibited their earning their living in that Province."

By the words "Naturalised or not" it is clear from the whole context that His Lordship had reference to naturalised Chinese or alien Chinese.

Seeing, therefore, that the decision in Bryden's case must be restricted to "the particular facts" thereof, it is essential to bear in mind exactly what the facts were upon which that decision was given.

On turning to the report it appears that when the appeal came before the Privy Council it was presented to their Lordships on the assumption that there were only two classes of Chinese in this Province who were affected by the Legislation in question, that is to say, aliens and naturalised persons. That the whole case turns on that point, and that only, plainly appears by a perusal of the argument of counsel as well as the judgment of their Lordships. Counsel for the appellant took the ground that it was an attempt to restrict the settlement of Chinese aliens in British Columbia, which, it was argued, was a violation of the spirit of treaties, was opposed to the comity of nations, was calculated to create complications between the British and Chinese Governments, and conflict with the exclusive authority of the Dominion Parliament. Strangely enough, the counsel representing this Province, as intervenant, never, according to the report, intimated that there was a third class which might be affected, suggesting only that naturalised persons, as well as aliens, might come within the scope of the enactment. At page 582, the argument on this point appears as follows:—

“But Chinamen are not necessarily aliens. The term ‘Chinese’ or ‘Chinaman’ is one which is perfectly well understood in Canadian legislation, and means persons of Chinese habits and origin. It may include aliens within its meaning; but most of the Chinese who are affected by this legislation have been naturalised.”

It is remarkable that there is not a word here, nor in the judgment, about natural-born Chinese subjects of the Crown apart from naturalisation, and the fact of their existence had evidently never been suspected by Counsel or they would not have failed to have drawn their Lordships’ attention to it. This is strikingly brought out by the language of Lord Watson, p. 587, as follows:—

“But the leading feature of the enactments consists in this, that they have, and can have, no application except to Chinamen who are aliens or naturalised subjects, and that they establish no rule or regulation except that these aliens or naturalised subjects shall not work, or be allowed to work, in underground coal mines within the Province of British Columbia.

“Their Lordships see no reason to doubt that, by virtue of s. 91, sub-s. (25), the Legislature of the Dominion is invested with exclusive authority in all matters which directly concern the rights, privileges and disabilities of the class of Chinamen who are resident in the Provinces of Canada. They are also of opinion that the whole pith and substance of the enactments of s. 4 of the ‘Coal Mines Regulation Act,’ in so far as objected to by the appellant company, consists in establishing a statutory prohibition which affects aliens or naturalised subjects, and therefore trench upon the exclusive authority of the Parliament of Canada.”

The foregoing extracts show clearly that while the decision must be taken as the law on the incomplete facts as presented to their Lordships, yet, as pointed out by the Lord Chancellor in Tomey Homma’s case, it can have no application to the present case where the additional fact of the first and last importance is now made clearly to appear, that is, the existence of the said third class of Chinese residents of this Province in regard to whom the power of the Legislature is not doubted, and to that class the enactment can have and does have full application. A leading result of Homma’s case is that if one class of a race so affected is beyond the scope of the Federal power because not partaking of alienage or naturalisation, then legislation affecting it is within the scope of the Provincial authority in “local works and undertakings,” or “civil rights,” and in so dealing with a race over which it has authority the impeached enactment is not invalidated because it affects other classes of the same race over which it has not authority provided it applies to them all alike, places them on the same footing, and does not discriminate between them. This is apparent from the Federal naturalisation Act itself (R. S. C., Cap. 113), for sec. 15, which, while providing that an alien who has been naturalised shall have within Canada “all political and other rights, powers and privileges” of a natural-born British subject, at the same time declares that he “shall be subject to all obligations” to which such natural-born person is subject. No naturalised Chinaman, and much less an alien, can therefore have greater rights in British Columbia than one who is a natural-born British subject.

Then there is that other fact, already set out, of scarcely secondary importance, which also serves to distinguish this case from Bryden’s, i.e., that the Legislature uses the word “Chinese” in the broad racial and descriptive sense hereinbefore defined. In fact this case, as now properly understood, has arrived at the stage which was foreseen by the Lord Chancellor when he pointed out in Tomey Homma’s case that this question of the rights of Japanese (and consequently Chinese) did not necessarily depend upon alienage and naturalisation at all, and that the introduction of a third element, i.e., the natural-born subject, gave the case a widely different complexion.

On the whole matter, therefore, the conclusion I have come to, after a very careful, and, I may say, almost anxious consideration, is that on the particular facts the present case is as clearly distinguishable from Bryden’s case as was Tomey Homma’s; to hold otherwise would result in the conclusion that the rights of the natural-born subjects of the King in British Columbia are less than those of aliens or naturalised Chinese. Such a result is not only directly in the teeth of the Naturalisation Act, but is so repugnant to common sense and natural justice that I could not force myself to accept it unless I was compelled to do so by the clearest judicial precedent.

In the foregoing necessarily full expression of my opinion, I am fortified and encouraged by the remarks of the Lord Chancellor in Tomey Homma’s case above quoted, who, in effect, pointed out that this Court had surrendered its own judgment in the fancied following of what it believed to be their Lordships’ decision in Bryden’s case, without appreciating the essential distinction created by the difference in the facts. This, I cannot now help feeling, was unfortunate, because in questions of such gravity it seems most desirable that all the salient local circumstances and facts should be brought forward and fully considered (and particularly so in the case at bar, because no Counsel has appeared in opposition to those representing the Crown), to the end that should the matter go higher, every circumstance this time will be fully admitted to the appellate tribunal which would be likely to be of assistance to it, whereby the danger of further misapprehension of the real state of affairs in this Province may be avoided.

Finally, in the formal answer to the question submitted to us, and on the particular facts, I do, pursuant to s. 12 of the “Supreme Court Act, 1904,” certify to His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor in Council that in my opinion said Rule 34 should be regarded as essentially a regulation for the working of coal mines, and therefore is within the powers of the Legislature of British Columbia.
